RAQSPYR AR.UK. rar (View File Download Link). 3ds emulator file info.Q: Django's "groups" setting ignores Permissions Using Django's Inline CreateView and POST_TRANSACTION_PERIOD = 0, I cannot create groups of users. Permissions appear to be ignored: groups: print(groups.get_queryset().count()) # 1 groups = Group.objects.filter(name__in=['group1', 'group2', 'group3']) new_group = Group.objects.create(name="New group") new_group.save() # Group.objects.filter(name__in=['New group']).update(name='New group 2') # Fails (Error message shows that permissions are ignored) groups.get_queryset().update(name='New group 2') # Fails (Error message shows that permissions are ignored) If I add the permission manually, like the last two, then everything works: permission_name: print(permission_name) # read_group_permissions permission_name = Permission.objects.create(name="New group", content_type=None, codename='read_group_permissions') permission_name.save() permission_name: print(permission_name) # read_group_permissions groups.get_queryset().update(name='New group 2') Is this expected behavior? What am I missing? A: The get_queryset() method on an InlineModelAdmin returns instances of the given model rather than the filtered queryset. The filter you are applying here is occurring during the model's save() or update() method and the update() method of a model instance will return the model instance itself. So, your approach to update() the instance
