I have a friend who has a hard time with certain math concept I can't wrap my head around how time dilation is calculated. So he tells me this: Q: At what speed will I have 1 second in the future if I'm going 90kmph and the trip takes 2 seconds? A: $3.0 * 1.1 * 0.9 = 2.62$ seconds I have trouble understanding why isn't 2.62 times 60km/h, i.e. an error of 30%? How can gravity slow down the time? A: It's because it's not a simple question. It's a question of acceleration which affects the clock, but you have to do some heavy calculations to consider that. The expression may be written more easily without going into detail, as $\gamma = \frac{1}{\sqrt{1 - v^2/c^2}}$ which means that the time period Δt is going to be $\Delta t \gamma$. The mass M is going to be constant, then the acceleration $a = \frac{v^2}{r}$. The force is $F = \frac{GMm}{r^2}$ which means a force $F = \frac{GMm}{r^2} a$. This is just Newton's second law of motion. The acceleration is $a = \frac{F}{M}$. The force of gravity is just $\frac{GMm}{r^2}$. We can then say that the time period Δt is just $\Delta t \gamma = \Delta t \frac{1}{\sqrt{1 - \left(1 - \frac{v^2}{c^2}\right)}}$. That's it. If you want to make the math more rigorous you can do it, but it's already a lot of work. . Djokovic is still dominant on this type of surface and is giving a great account of himself on grass. His win in the US Open final last summer was impressive, as was his first round win in Wimbledon a couple of weeks ago. He won the French Open final three years ago. He has played extremely well throughout the summer and is a genuine title threat at both
