plant serine proteinase has become an important research direction in recent years. This review focuses on the progress in the research on inhibitors of the serine proteinases in plant, especially the inhibitors of chymotrypsin/trypsin, subtilisin, subtilisin-like proteinase(SBP), pepsin and elastase. In addition, a brief summary of the inhibitors from microorganisms and animal was also given. All the informations in this paper can provide a foundation for further research in this field.

w32dasm 8.93. UruSoft w32dasm Overview.Q: Laravel validation hasMany I'm trying to figure out a way to validate if a user has a relationship with the 'App' model in Laravel when creating new entries. I have a 'User' model that has a 'App' model as a hasMany relation. I want to make sure that the user creates a 'App' if they have a user. I can't figure out how to do this though. This is my current validation: $validator = Validator::make($request->all(), [ 'name' =>'required', 'developer.name' =>'required', 'developer.uuid' =>'required' ]); if ($validator->fails()) { return redirect('/install-apps'); } return redirect('/'); Can anyone help with this? A: So I figured it out. I set up a 'HasApp' model that extends the 'User' model. In the User model's create function I'm creating the App model: $user->app = app::make($request->input('app')); Then in the App model's create method, I check the user's hasApp relationship: $user = Auth::user();
