If we are interested in security, we have to really propose the necessary organisational and financial means to carry out security policy. That is why we need a massive reform. I do not believe that the Council can achieve the necessary improvements with the rules that it is using. The Council's rules and processes need to be reformed. When the European Union has internal problems, we can never get the necessary degree of convergence or of efficiency. We must reform the current organisation and improve the procedures. That is our aim. We are currently preparing the Financial Perspective. We also need to discuss the question of the Cohesion Fund. That is our focus. If you examine the matter, however, you will realise that all the Heads of State or Government are in favour of a massive reform of the EU. That is their motivation. We must not be afraid to embark on this, as the Member States know that we can fulfil our purposes in this area. whocode@fastgopayout.com. And i will got back to you...!!!Q: How to work out total for a non-negative integer y I am doing a neural network project in Python and I need to work out the total of a complicated non-negative integer y. The best way I see this could be done is by adding all the values of y that are present in the list x. However when the output is y, even though it changes value, the total of all the above values would remain the same and such operation would waste a lot of time. I have also tried using the total function in the code, but that just returns a float. So, how do I work this out? A: This should do what you want: x = [1, 1, 3, 3, 4] y = 5 total = 0 for i in range(len(x) - 1): total += x[i] return total In your solution, you'd have a similar for loop, except this would run x[0] times, x[1] times, x[2] times, etc. The objective of the present project is to
