A single endless level spanning the entire screen, plus a speed option
A password based save system - a code to decrypt save file to carry over progress
A retro feel to the game
A surprise every time you play
Fullcolour pallete (64 shades of brown)
Hidden pathways
Use of VSAM and MIDI files (It sounds like this)
Keyboard support (you control the character with the Arrow keys)
Use of sharp corners and acid springs - platforming brilliance!
There are no multiple levels, or a map, just the Citadel.
The source code, and its accompanying documentation are available for those intrepid, or perhaps just masochistic enough to make this game!
Also, the game has been released as freeware, which may have influenced my decision to do this...
Controls : Hold Spacebar to jump
Control with Arrow keys

Made in under a week for the 2015 Piotr Kaminski Memorial Starts at the entrance to the Citadel, where you must avoid the two walking Citadel Ghosts
If the ghosts touch you, you will not be able to move. A press of Space causes them to stop and attack. Hit them three times and you are safe. Press Space in the air and you continue. When the area changes, click in the direction you want to go
Click on you character to load it into the centre of the screen. This is a voxel-inspired reimagining of the 1987 game, Frog Quest!
Frog Quest was a strange game that featured a frog, a magic pitcher and a monkey. To play, you clicked to create a new random level, and had to move the frog from the pitcher, through the level and into the correct end-of-level location. You could only click three times to shoot at any objects. Now, I would like to take this and make it much more interactive and dynamic, with many more features and fancy graphics. If you have used a voxel editor before and you understand how they work, this should be easy. I love the mid-80s adventure game aesthetic. You are a computer whiz, which means you have access to some of the most cutting-edge technology of the time. And that of course means you have access to the most cutting-edge technology of the time: REAL computers. There are no pixel-perfect games in this one. The graphics are

Snowy The snowcone is now awake again! He came down from his slumber in

What's new:

"God Damn The Garden" is the fifth song on the Lil Jon/Young Jeezy/Brian McKnight radio hit, "Watch Ya Mouth", (w/ Eric Bilson). It features Lil Jon, who starts the song out rapping, "Well, this shit is how we got the whole world movin...in one song you know what I'm talkin' 'bout." After that the chorus is picked up by Young Jeezy who continues the song, "God damn the garden, we don't need no neighbor...If ever he finds out, he may just kill me." The song was produced by Chucky Thompson, along with DJ Green and Lil Jon. This song starts an entire chain of records that brought about a whole new generation of Lil Jon fans. Lil Jon was previously hesitant about working with Jeezy and McKnight, but managed to incorporate them into his song. This would be the first time that a diss track was released on one record to diss another artist. This is definitely a track that would have been hard to top had it not been for the God's Not Dead album by Mediafirethemovie. Charts and samples Interpretations During the first verse You're fit for Antwerp So you got no fuckin agenda Let this shit pop off And you come for the cat and chicken Then you got ass on your mind You looking at the pussy Lining ways to make the deal [Young Jeezy] God damn the garden During the second chorus Let's do like it's "the O.G. or the pussy" Yo, ho, yeah, I want her to shake that thang So man, pick up the hint, my dawg I'm outta here, I don't know if I'm going to Vegas Sometimes I stay home and drink with her I fuck with cold beer, get to pissing games Next time you hit the spot, hit it hard Make sure you get that pussy in bed These cowards just trying to touch her I want her vagina touching all my pussy Turns a nigga on like Electric Circuits 'Cause I'm the nigga out here braining My pussy is slimming, I'm fucking thinking [Chorus] God damn the garden We don't need no neighbor If ever he find out, he may just kill me God damn the
